

I dream

that I wake
pass a hand
but it is locked

up in the morning,
through my hair,
knots begin to form

Some days, maybe some weeks later, this happens in "real" life...
Let it happen, guided by the memory of this dream.

Jata in Sanskrit designates the locks of matted hairs, what we call dreadlocks.

If I take a lock of hair between my fingers, I can clearly feel that this lock conducts prana between my hand and my cranium.

Hair constitutes nadis & the more the locks entangle and thicken, the more Prana goes through them.

"If I add the beard jata between my hands, the circulation is modified: to the initial circulation are added other circulations, which result in a more global circulation & endowed with greater intensity."

It is the prana that takes care of them to be the architecture of the jatas, shaping them to be the most adept for us.
